University Dormitory To Open In Fall

Four hundred University of Washington students will be the first occupants of a $1.7 million dormitory to be completed this fall. The dormitory is located on the northeast corner of campus, on the site of the old Storrs Hall.

The dormitory will house 364 students, and will provide living quarters for both male and female students. The building will be four stories high, with a central core containing stairs and elevator shafts. Each floor will contain 91 rooms, with each room accommodating two students. The dormitory will also feature a large common room on each floor, as well as a kitchen, laundry facilities, and study rooms.

The dormitory is designed to provide a safe and comfortable environment for its residents, with features such as fire sprinklers, smoke detectors, and emergency exit signs. The building will also be equipped with modern plumbing and heating systems.

The dormitory is expected to be completed by the end of the year, and will be ready for occupancy when school opens in September. The Associated Students Laboratory will be located on the upper floor of the dormitory.

Kidney Research Discovery

KWU Device Cuts Experiment Time

By WILLIAM LANGTON

The problem of making a kidney dialyzer for a human kidney has been greatly simplified by the discovery of a new device that makes it possible to produce the dialyzer in a matter of hours instead of weeks or months.

The new device, which is called the "KWU Device," is a small, portable machine that can be used in a hospital or a laboratory. It works by using a special solution to remove wastes from the blood and replace them with new blood.

The KWU Device was developed by a team of researchers at the University of Washington, led by Dr. Albert L. Bass.

Dr. Bass said, "Our new device is a major breakthrough in the field of kidney dialysis. It allows us to produce dialyzers in just a few hours, instead of the weeks or months that are usually required."

The KWU Device is being tested in several hospitals and laboratories around the country, and the initial results are promising. It is expected to be available for general use within the next few years.

Program to Prepare 12

For Inliner-City Teaching

Twelve weeks will be required for the program to prepare effective secondary teaching in the School of Education.

The program is funded by the Department of Education and the Washington State Department of Social and Health Services. It includes courses in education, psychology, and social work.

The program is designed to meet the needs of secondary schools in the state, and is open to all qualified applicants. It is not limited to those already working in the field of education.

The program will begin in September and conclude in December.
